

iPredator Cyber-Attack Risk Assessments

by

Michael Nuccitelli, Psy.D.

Dr. Nuccitelli's cyber-attack risk assessments have been formatted and designed to work as data collection, assessment, educational and internet safety monitoring tools. Of the thirty one checklists & inventories, the IISC tools (thirteen checklists & one interview) are formatted for verification and initial screening for internet safety, cyber-attack preparedness and information technology weaknesses. The IPI tools (twelve inventories) are designed for inquiry, open discussion and inspection of internet safety, cyber-attack preparedness and information technology vulnerabilities. The additional five checklists address internet addiction, online psychopaths, predatory trolls, cyber deception and internet safety.

Dr. Nuccitelli specifically designed them for the primary purpose of being used as data collection and education tools. Although he spent an enormous amount of time in their development and confident of their diagnostic capacities, he did not run them through clinical trials or validity examinations as commonly conducted with psychometric testing instruments.

Dr. Nuccitelli does not falsely claim that any of his checklists or inventories are psychometric instruments with extensive reliability & validity. However, he is confident they were thoroughly researched and designed. These assessments are useful tools for information security professionals, cyberpsychologists, educators, legal professionals, law enforcement, behavioral healthcare providers, online users and primary caregivers. The thirty one risk assessments listed are formatted as seen in Google and other search engines.
